Yatron fires Yerger over gun incident

The wreckage of a fire truck lies next to the Amtrak Crescent train which struck it at a grade crossing Thursday near Catlett, Va. Two Catlett firemen were killed, and 150 people were injured, most of them aboard the New Orleans-bound train.

CATLETT, Va. — An Amtrak passenger train was blowing its horn when it slammed into a fire truck at a rural crossing, killing two firefighters and injuring about 150 people aboard the train, authorities said today.

Twelve of 16 cars and both locomotives of the Crescent derailed in the accident about 7:40 p.m. Thursday about 30 miles southwest of Washington, D.C., Amtrak spokesman Wick Leatherwood said. The train was bound from New York to Atlanta and New Orleans.

"The train was blowing its horn as it was supposed to," Leatherwood said. "Some people try to beat the train and they always lose out. We're very saddened by that... but people just don't have the perception of the speed and think the train can come to a quick stop, and it can't, not with that tonnage behind the train."

Sgt. Thomas Wolfe, a spokesman for the Fairfax County Fire and Rescue Department, who was at the scene today, said it was too early to say what happened.

"That's pure speculation on anyone's part to say what the driver thought or saw at the time... It is possible he had sirens going," Wolfe said.

There were no warning lights or bars at the crossing, which is not uncommon since it was on private land, state police spokeswoman Lucy Caldwell said. She said she did not know who owned the land.

Work crews were clearing the wreckage this morning with a crane and other heavy equipment. The fire truck was shattered by the impact, and the biggest piece of the vehicle remained flattened across the front of the locomotive. It was so mangled that the only clue that it had been a fire truck was its red color.

"I felt us go across one track, and the next thing I know, I woke up and I was in the hospital," said Frankie Herndon, one of five firefighters aboard the truck.

Herndon, who was treated at a hospital for minor injuries and released, said he did not see or hear the train.

Caldwell identified the dead firefighters as Mark Miller, 23, and Matt Smith, 22, both of Catlett. Two other firefighters and seven train passengers were in serious but stable condition today, hospital officials said.

Fauquier Sheriff's Deputy R. R. Crawford said 150 or more people on the train were injured.

National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Allan Pollock said the board sent an investigative team to the scene.

NTSB spokeswoman Rachel Hatterman said the team spent the night gathering documents and information. "We're talking to witnesses, to the crew to see why it happened."

The train was carrying 379 passengers and a crew of 20, Amtrak spokesman John Jacobson said.

County cuts losses, snaps up landfill deals

Rather than spend millions of dollars in legal costs to fight trash adversaries, the Berks County commissioners Thursday preliminarily approved deals that eventually could net the county more than $11 million a year in host fees from the operation of two landfills.

Under the agreements, the county would withdraw its condemnation of 271 acres in New Morgan to allow Browning-Ferris

- Superfund cleanup, including Berks site, lagging behind.

Industries to build and operate a landfill there.

And, in exchange for limited use of the Colebrookdale Landfill in Earl Township, Berks no longer would contest the operations or current expansion plans of the landfill, which is owned by the Delaware County Solid Waste Authority.

Further, a tentative agreement with the Western Berks Refuse Authority calls for the county to locate a recycling facility on authority grounds in Cumru Township.

Also, the county and the authority have worked out a cooperative arrangement for using the authority landfill and making Western Berks member municipalities a part of the county solid waste plan.

County Commissioners Glenn B. Reber and Michael F. Feeney voted to tentatively approve the agreements.

Commissioner Anthony J. Caraballo, board chairman who said he had learned of the proposals only Thursday morning, obtained because he wanted time to review the proposals.

Lucien B. Calhoun, a county trash consultant, told the commissioners at their Thursday meeting that tentative agreements had been reached after six weeks of negotiations with Browning-Ferris of Malvern, Chester County, the Delaware County authority, and the Western Berks authority.

The agreement that would allow Browning-Ferris to proceed with plans to operate a landfill in New Morgan would require BFI to pay Berks host fees of about $3 million a year initially. The deal calls for the Berks host fee to escalate, and over a period of 10 years it could reach about $10 million a year.

Under the agreement, BFI would also do the following:

- Guarantee Berks 25 years of disposal capacity at the landfill at an initial dumping fee of between $45 and $60 a ton.

- Stipulate that all out of county waste trucks use the Pennsylvanian Turnpike.

- Provide access to a county inspector.

- Not expand the landfill or seek other sites in Berks without the consent of the county.

In exchange, Berks would agree to the following:

- Withdraw the condemnation

President views damage by Hugo

Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — President Bush today toured areas of South Carolina devastated by Hurricane Hugo, viewing scenes of flattened buildings and forests and signing a $1.1 billion relief package for its victims.

"I'm here trying to mobilize the resources of the federal government," Bush said, standing in front of a school bus demolished by a fallen tree in nearby Summerville.

Bush was shown around the grounds of the Dorchester County Courthouse — littered with fallen trees, smashed vehicles, and twisted metal — by Summerville Mayor Berlin Meyers, who called the Sept. 21 storm "the worst storm that ever happened to our state."

The president, patting the mayor on the shoulder, said, "Why am I here? I'm here to give a little encouragement to a courageous man."

The overcast skies cleared long enough for Bush to take a 15-minute helicopter tour toward the coast, flying low over some of the hardest hit areas of downtown Charleston.

At the end of his trip, the president told a small crowd at the air base, "You couldn't help be impressed to hear the people say, 'We're going to bounce back.'"

Bush, who had been criticized by some officials for not organizing aid faster, said he was satisfied the federal government was doing all that could be done.

"To the critics, I say, I understand. We want to solve the problem," he said.

In signing the relief bill aboard Air Force One en route from Washington, Bush said the assistance approved by the Senate on Thursday was "imperative to those who are suffering from the devastating effects of Hurricane Hugo."

Bush's 15-minute motorcade to the inland town of Summerville took him past pine forests filled with trees snapped in two, mangled road signs, decimated trailer parks and dozens of buildings with their roofs torn off.

South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell told the president "most people didn't realize how broad this devastation was."

He said "untold millions of dollars in damage" remained and that 550,000 people were displaced and that 270,000 were out of work.

Bush said the federal relief package "will help the victims of Hurricane Hugo rebuild their homes, communities, businesses, and lives."

A gunshot was fired accidentally into a television set in the squad room of the county drug enforcement office around noon Thursday, and a probe into the incident has been undertaken by District Attorney George C. Yatron.

The shot was discharged from the handgun of Frederick H. Yerger, a two-Muhlenberg Town Ship policeman, and two county employees were in the squad room of the Berks County Narcotics Information Center in the Medical Arts Building, 230 N. Fifth St.

The report of the discharge was confirmed by Yatron and Lawrence Palmer, BUNC executive director.

Palmer said he was in his office when the shot was fired and did not witness the incident.

Palmer said Yerger, a retired city police lieutenant who is coordinator of the county drug task force, came into his office moments later and informed him of the incident.

Yerger and the two county employees were eating lunch in the squad room when the weapon accidentally fired into a television mounted on a metal cabinet. Palmer said was checking his weapon, but the safety wasn't on, and the gun went off.

Yatron said he was contacted by Muhlenberg Police Chief Harry N. Smith, who plans to submit to the district attorney a report which purportedly offers a different version of the shooting incident.

Yatron said he did not wish to comment on his conversation with Smith until he receives the report from Smith and the Muhlenberg officers, who were in the office at the time the gun fired.

Palmer also is planning to submit a report to the district attorney.

Smith could not be contacted, but other law enforcement officials said the Muhlenberg policemen claimed Yerger pointed the gun at the screen and placed his finger on the trigger.

A shot then fired into the television screen.

The sources said the television was on, and the channel was turned to a soap opera. They said a screen in the squad room of the Berks County Narcotics Information Center was also damaged.

The police department said the incident could not be confirmed. One of the policemen, officials

Opposition continues for dump expansion

By Mark Nemlow

Eagle/Times

Earl Township area residents in a second meeting with the Delaware County Solid Waste Authority Thursday again expressed their disenchantment with a proposal to expand the Colebrookdale Landfill.

Earlier Thursday, the Berks County Commissioners tentatively approved an agreement with the Delaware County authority, under which county opposition to current expansion plans at the dump would be lifted.

Before the meeting, Joan R. Jeffries, chairman of the Colebrookdale Landfill Advisory Council, said she personally would lobby against the tentative agreement.

If it were approved, Jeffries said, she would demand that the county not reassess property in eastern Berks because the expansion would "devalue property" in the area.

Addressing authority officials on their expansion plans, Nicholas Lopata of Earl Township said, "You ought to consider the area landowners."

"The odor is strong. I don't think they'd put up with it in Delaware County. There are a lot of places there. Find room in your own landfill and leave us alone, please."

Others in the crowd of about 25 people in Earl Township Elementary School expressed similar sentiments, but David Brooman, authority attorney, told them that the authority could not leave.

"It's not in our control," he said. "The facts exist, and we can't change them. The 1985 Delaware County solid waste management plan called for the Colebrookdale Landfill. We are implementing that plan."

Brooman said that several

Berks Sanitary Landfill is added to priority list

From our news service

The Berks Sanitary Landfill in Spring Township has been added to the national priority list for cleanup under the federal Superfund cleanup law, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said Thursday.

The dump, along Wheatfield Road in the township, has been closed since 1986.

It was proposed for Superfund because of the large amount of hazardous pollutants detected there.

site studies in densely populated Delaware County were taken.

They indicated that there was no feasible spot within its borders to handle the amount of trash generated there, he said.

The Delaware authority, which purchased the landfill in 1985, is seeking a 60-acre expansion. Officials had answered questions about the proposal at another meeting two weeks earlier, but there was not enough time to address all of them.

In response to the concerns of local residents, Brooman promised that the landfill would be well-run.

State Rep. Dennis E. Leh, an Amity Township Republican, complained that wasn't enough.

"Something is happening to these people's quality of life, something terrible," he said, adding that area residents have no political control over the Delaware County body. He argued that the authority should provide "restoration for the quality of life lowered."

Brooman responded that money would not resolve the problem, though he said the authority would pay to repair any property damaged by the landfill.

Consultants for Delaware County said that odor problems around the facility would be reduced by 1992 when a trash-to-energy plant under construction in Chester is scheduled to go on line.

From that point, most of the trash delivered to the landfill would be in the form of concentrated ash byproducts of the plant, which authority officials claimed would not have as strong a stench as the solid waste now being dumped.

At the earlier meeting, officials said trash deliveries to the facility would be cut by 75 percent under the new process.

After further questioning Thursday night, Brooman admitted that the number might be closer to half, should Westinghouse Electric Corp., owner of the trash-to-energy plant, choose to process out of county trash.

The expansion plan is being considered by the state Department of Environmental Resources, which will hold a public hearing on the subject Tuesday, Oct. 17, at 7 p.m. in Boyer town Junior High School West.

Cleanups by Superfund are termed 'superslow'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The federal government is losing ground in its program to clean up the most dangerous hazardous waste dumps in the nation.

In eight years cleanup work has been completed on only about three dozen sites, and on Thursday the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency added 93 new properties in 32 states that need to be cleared of hazardous waste and debris.

The additional sites bring to 1,194 the waste dumps scheduled to be decontaminated under the Superfund program, which is aimed at dealing with the nation's most hazardous waste problems. EPA officials have said the program likely will cost tens of billions of dollars and take decades.

The national priority list for cleanup projects would have grown even more, except for a decision by the EPA to also delete 31 sites that had been on the list.

Of the 31 sites, 27 are to be shifted to another cleanup program within the agency. Cleanup activities were to continue at those 27 sites, but not under the Superfund program, said EPA spokeswoman Mary Meyers.

The other four sites were deleted because the health risks associated with them no longer were considered sufficient to meet the Superfund criteria, said Meyers.

U.S. to discuss coffee quotas

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Bush, reaffirming confidence in Colombian President Virgilio Barco's fight against drug lords, says he wants to reopen talks on coffee export prices and launch other economic measures to help bolster the South American country to boost U.S. benefits to Colombia particularly with agricultural and manufactured items, Fitzwater said in a written statement.

Bush also told Barco the United States will work with the international financial institutions to support increased economic assist-although work technically has not been finished. EPA officials maintain.

The additional target locations for cleanup announced Thursday were spread over 32 states and Puerto Rico. Sixteen of the additional sites were in Pennsylvania, nine in California, and seven in Washington state.

Among the new sites were 11 federal facilities including the Rocky Flats plutonium processing plant in Colorado and four nuclear weapons plants near Hanford, Wash.

These facilities joined 52 other military installations, nuclear fuel processing plants, and other federal facilities, already on the EPA priority cleanup list.

Reilly recently announced plans to put greater emphasis on getting polluters to pay for cleanup projects, through civil suits and a threat of penalties.

Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Senate Superfund subcommittee and a frequent critic of the EPA's handling of the cleanup program, said the announcement that additional sites had been put on the priority list marks an important step forward in getting these sites cleaned up.

Overall, he added, the program continues to have problems.

Officials mostly pleased with trash pacts

Most of the players involved in the tentative agreements between Berks County and three solid waste management interests appeared Thursday, following a vote by the county commissioners to support the deals.

Under the biggest agreement, the county would withdraw its condemnation of 271 acres in New Morgan to allow Browning Ferris Industries to operate a landfill there.

In exchange, Berks would receive about $3 million in trust fees in the first year and eventually as much as $10 million a year.

"BFI is happy," said J. Larry Boling, vice president of the Malvern, Chester County, firm. "I think this is a good compromise for all of us. The people of Berks County are the ones that will benefit the most."

Initially BFI was offering to pay the county a trust fee of about $4 million a year.

The cost of the new accord is much more. But rather than spend the next three years in litigation, BFI felt it was the better way. Boling said he estimated it would have cost BFI and the county about $3 million each to fight the issue in court.

Boling said he expects the landfill in New Morgan to be in operation in late 1993.

Under another agreement, the county would no longer contest the operations or current expansion plans of the Colebrookdale Landfill in Earl Township, owned by the Delaware County Solid Waste Authority.

In exchange, the county would get an annual base fee of $1.2 million.

"I'm very happy this is occurring today," said Joseph W. Vastura, Delaware County authority chairman.

"The (Berks) commissioners have shown a good deal of foresight," said Matthew J. Hayes, authority treasurer and Delaware County executive director. "This now affords us a formal way to be as good a neighbor as possible."

The third agreement, with the Western Berks Refuse Authority, calls for the county to locate a recycling facility on authority grounds in Cumru Township. The county and the authority also have worked out a deal for using the authority landfill and making Western Berks member municipalities a part of the county solid waste plan.

"The negotiations between the county, its representatives and Western Berks have been very productive, not only for the entities at the letter of intent, but also for all of the municipalities in the county plan," said John A. Hedder Jr., authority solicitor.

The two county commissioners who tentatively approved the deals, Glenn B. Reber and Michael F. Feeney, contend the landfill host fees were not the driving force behind the accords. The third commissioner, board chairman Anthony J. Caraballo, abstained.

"The county is now able to specify the sites to be used for recycling, resource recovery, and landfilling," said Reber. "All litigation matters have been resolved, and landfill costs can now be analyzed."

"Landfill capacity will be available immediately upon approval of the county plan and will extend for an unprecedented 25 years after the resource-recovery facility is in operation."

As for the policy reversal concerning out-of-county trash, Reber said, the county legally has no control over the issue.

"We looked at the reality of this situation and had to deal positively with as many aspects as we could," he said.

Feeney said the accords

address his environmental concerns. "I'm more concerned from Day One with the environment," Feeney said. "The commissioners we have from Delaware County is that they won't expand, and BFI won't expand, and they will not seek hazardous wastes."

"If any out-of-county trash comes into Berks, it comes in by the township, not rural roads."

"This agreement will definitely protect the environment of Berks from further raping."

In abstaining from the vote, Caraballo said he did not have enough time to review the proposals.

"I did not see any of those agreements until they were plopped down on front of me this morning," Caraballo said. The accords were presented to the commissioners by Lucien B. Calhoun, a county trash consultant.

Caraballo also said the public should have had the opportunity to comment on the arrangements before a vote by the commissioners.

"I think it's very presumptuous of the county to make the deals and go to the municipalities and say 'Take it or leave it,'" he said.

Caraballo said the accords are good from a money standpoint. But, he said, Berks should be interested in more than just the money.

of 271 acres where BFI would locate the landfill.

Withdrawal objections to the state Department of Environmental Resources on the processing of the BFI permit and not enter litigation involving zoning.

Include the BFI landfill in the county trash plan.

The agreement also would give Berks the option of using another landfill if a competitor offers a better price.

The county would not realize host fees from the BFI landfill until the dump begins operation, expected late in 1993.

The compromise struck with the Delaware County authority, owners of the Colebrookdale landfill, calls for an annual $1.2 million host fee to be paid to Berks beginning immediately after a formal contract is signed.

In addition, the agreement calls for the Delaware County authority to do the following:

Provide up to 1,000 tons per day of disposal space to Berks.

Indemnify Berks and its municipalities from any dump cleanup or closure costs.

Limit disposal to trash from Delaware and Berks counties and not seek further expansions of the landfill without the consent of Berks.

Negotiate a plan with Berks to regulate truck traffic, allow Berks inspectors on the site, and support legislation on the state level for a bypass route to be built around Boyertown.

Give Berks the first right of refusal if the authority ever sells the landfill.

In exchange, Berks would agree to do the following:

Not oppose the current expansions that would enlarge the landfill to 213 acres.

Allow the authority or Westinghouse Electric — the company providing trash disposal services for Delaware County — to propose resource-recovery capacity for Berks.

In addition to supporting the Berks solid waste plan, the arrangement with Western Berks calls for the authority to do the following:

Provide a 15-acre site for recycling and transfer facilities.

Provide interim disposal of 400 to 450 tons of trash per day at the Western Berks landfill in Cumru Township.

Develop a composting facility for waste-water sludges, leaves, and yard waste, and provide disposal capacity for industrial residual waste.

In return, Berks would do the following for the authority:

Pay a site-lease fee for the recycling and transfer facilities.

Direct municipal trash to the Western Berks landfill until the close of the landfill in 1994 or 1995.

Allow Western Berks member municipalities to join the county trash plan at no penalty after the landfill closes.

Provide a recycling facility by Jan. 1, 1993.

Following preliminary approval of the agreements, the commissioners directed Calhoun to negotiate definitive agreements with the three parties.

Two die as Amtrak train derails

Rescue personnel formed a human chain to guide the passengers through brush away from the train.

Juliet Blair, an American University student from Ossining, N.Y., said help arrived within minutes and rescuers used ladders to help people climb down. "We were really lucky," she said.

An unidentified resident told WQHA Radio his son saw the accident. He said it would have been difficult for the truck driver not to have seen the train because the train had its light on, visibility was good, and the crossing is on a flat, straight stretch of track.

Passenger William Roby of Bowie, Md., who was sitting toward the front of the train, said he heard a "big thump.... Then, I could tell the train came off its tracks. I started bracing myself."

Luckily the train wasn't going very fast, said Roby, who was traveling with a group to New Orleans to see Sunday's professional football game between Washington and New Orleans. Jacobson said the speed limit for the train was 70 mph at the crossing, but he did not know how fast the train was traveling.

One woman sitting in the front row of Roby's car was hurt when she fell out of her seat and hit the wall, and others were injured when their seats broke loose, Roby said.

The last reported derailment of an Amtrak train was April 6, when both engines and the first eight cars of an 18-car train jumped the tracks near Emporia, Va., 50 miles south of Richmond, causing minor injuries to 34 passengers

Runcie in Rome for talks with pope

Associated Press

ROME — Britain's archbishop of Canterbury arrived in Rome today for four days of talks with Pope John Paul II on uniting the Anglican and Roman Catholic churches, divided since the 16th century Reformation.

Archbishop Robert Runcie was greeted on arrival at Leonardo da Vinci Airport by top Vatican officials, including Cardinal Johannes Willebrands, president of the Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity.

In a brief statement, Runcie said his talks likely would be frank but he was confident they would lead to increased understanding.

Earlier, about 20 protesters at London's Heathrow Airport carried signs such as "Runcie resign" and "No to papal talks," as the archbishop departed. Runcie refused to speak to the group.

Runcie's secretary for ecumenical affairs, Canon Christopher Hill, said earlier he did not expect immediate union of the churches, but said talks about closer relations have been going on for 30 years.

"I am sure it will happen eventually because the founder of Christianity wanted one church," he said.

Anglican leaders said they thought unity between Anglicans and Catholics would not come until the 21st century.

"It will happen, eventually," said Cardinal Basil Hume, archbishop of Westminster and the leader of Catholics in England and Wales.

Runcie and John Paul have met four times, but this is Runcie's first official visit to Rome as spiritual head of the state church of England. He is also the leader of 70 million Anglicans worldwide, including 25 million U.S. Episcopalians.

The pope leads 850 million Roman Catholics.

In Rome, Runcie is expected to discuss the nature of the Anglican Communion and explain how its system of dispersed authority gives a measure of equality among church leaders.

The Anglican church does not have the Vatican's central directing authority, although its priests look to Canterbury for guidance.

The Anglican freedom allows members, such as the U.S. Episcopalians, to ordain women priests and, this year in the Boston Diocese, the first Anglican woman bishop.

There's no doubt about it, and the pope himself has said so, that the ordination of women and especially the consecration of a woman as bishop, constitute very considerable difficulties for us and also the Orthodox church," Hume said.

Anglicans and Catholics have discussed for many years how their churches might draw closer together.

Runcie caused a stir last week by telling an Italian journalist the Church of England might recognize papal authority in a united church, a view that had already been stated by the commission.

Evangelicals in the Church of England, who base their teaching strictly on the Bible and oppose unity with Rome, reacted indignantly.

Their chief spokesman, the Rev. David Samuel, said, "Many people in the Church of England don't want closer ties with the Church of Rome. Already, people are leaving the Church of England because of the Catholicizing tendencies."

Runcie said on British Broadcasting Corp. television Thursday he was looking forward to the visit.

"One thing which is at the center of my thoughts, and I believe at the center of his (the pope's), is that we do have a unity already," he said. "We don't have perfect unity, but there is something we have and sometimes people forget that."

Runcie is returning the pope's 1982 visit to Canterbury Cathedral, the Anglican mother church and the seat of the first archbishop, Augustine, who arrived in England from Rome in 597.

Runcie and the pope also met in Accra, Ghana, in 1980 and in Bombay, India, in 1986. They met again later that year in Assisi, Italy, when John Paul invited leaders of world religions to pray for peace in the city, which is the birthplace of St. Francis.

The first visit to Rome by an archbishop of Canterbury since the Reformation was paid by the late Geoffrey Fisher, who met Pope John XXIII on Dec. 2, 1960. The Vatican regarded the meeting as so sensitive that it barred photographers.

Pope Paul VI saw Michael Ramsey in 1966 and Donald Coggan in 1977.

Britain's King Henry VIII separated the English from the Catholic Church when the Vatican refused to annul his marriage with Katherine of Aragon. The 1534 Act of Supremacy acknowledged the king as "the only supreme head on Earth of the Church of England."

20 tons of cocaine seized

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Federal drug agents seized 20 tons of cocaine with a street value of $30 billion Friday at a warehouse in a quiet section of the city, and officials called it the biggest drug haul in history.

Three men were arrested and about $10 million in cash was seized at the warehouse on an upscale, tree-lined street in a mostly residential community of Sylmar near the San Gabriel Mountain foothills, said John M. Zienter, the Drug Enforcement Administration agent in charge for Los Angeles.

"I've been on this job for 25 years, and I've never seen so much dope in one place," Zienter said at a late morning news conference. "I couldn't believe it."

The three Mexican men, who were not immediately identified, were expected to be arraigned Monday on charges of possessing and distributing cocaine. In addition to the drugs and cash, agents seized financial records, customer lists, and a large truck-trailer that was parked at the warehouse entrance. No weapons were found.

The seized records offered a list of leads that was endless, said Ira Reimer, Los Angeles County district attorney.

Zienter placed the street value of the drug at $20 billion. Earlier, DEA spokesman Ralph Lochridge valued the haul at one-tenth that amount, based on a price of $100 a gram for pure cocaine, which he called a very conservative estimate. But Lochridge later said that when the cocaine was prepared for smoking, it could bring in far more.

"If it's rocked up in the form of crack, it could go as high as 10 times above that, up to $20 billion," Lochridge said, explaining that the figure was based on diluting the cocaine to the maximum amount possible and converting it to rock form to be sold individually on the street.

Using Los Angeles police techniques to calculate the value of diluted cocaine on the street — $170,250 per pound — the value of the drug would be nearly $7 billion.

"This seizure should put to rest any further speculation that Los Angeles is in fact the major pathway for cocaine entering the country and has in fact become a major distribution center in the United States," Lochridge said.

However, DEA officials in Washington cautioned against drawing conclusions that the bulk of cocaine entry into the country had shifted to Los Angeles.

"We are not in a position to say that there is a major shift in trends in cocaine coming into the country," said DEA spokesman Frank Shultz.

Through the third quarter of fiscal 1989 ending June 30, a total of 18.4 tons of cocaine had been seized in Miami, compared with 2.2 tons in Los Angeles, he said. In fiscal 1988, Miami seized 31.7 tons of cocaine, compared with 2.06 tons in Los Angeles.

Friday's haul easily topped the previous U.S. record of more than 8,700 pounds recorded in Port Lauderdale, Fla., in 1987, and surpassed the world record, a 12-ton seizure in Colombia, said DEA agent Phil Hartman.

The huge stash, arranged in orderly rows up to 10 feet high along the warehouse walls, was linked to the Medellín and Cali drug cartels of Colombia, Reimer said.

"These aren't just drug runners," Reimer said. "These are the major drug dealers. They don't get any bigger than this until you get to Colombia."

Henry Hunsicker, a skilled organ repairman, and Brian C. Bradbury, an 18-year-old Reading-Muhlenberg Vo-Tech senior, both of Hyde Park, are making history by constructing the first fair organ in the United States.

Berks fair organ a U.S. first

By Sam Procopio
Eagle Times

Brian C. Bradbury, an 18-year-old Reading-Muhlenberg Vocational-Technical student, has what he considers the best of both worlds — he is getting theory in the classroom, and he's out on a job earning money.

And what a job! He is assisting Henry Hunsicker, a skilled organ repairman, who is designing and building from scratch the first fair organ constructed in the United States. A fair organ uses music rolls and, as the name implies, is intended to be played at fairs.

Hunsicker and Bradbury have nicknamed the organ Melody but formally call it The Great American Fair Organ, the name inscribed on a gold plaque attached to the organ console.

The fair organ, which has an estimated value of $100,000, is being constructed in a trailer on Hunsicker's property at 215 Jefferson St., Hyde Park, for Donald Neilson, a real estate developer from Oaks, Montgomery County, who wanted to have a fair organ on wheels.

A worldwide first for this fair organ is that it has a console that allows a person actually to play impromptu at a fair. The console is from a 20-year-old organ previously used in the Plow Church, Robeson Township.

Some pipes for the organ are new. However, the used pipes are from an organ purchased in Blandon.

"You can't buy a fair organ in the United States; they are not made here, and you can't get them out of Europe," Hunsicker said. "Fair organs were built in France, Belgium, and Germany, but they were never built in a tractor-trailer, as this one is."

District Attorney George C. Yatron asked the state police on Friday to investigate an incident in which a bullet from a county drug agent's gun hit a television set in the Reading office of the Berks County Narcotics Information Center.

Yatron, who is heading the investigation, said it has not been determined why a shot was discharged from the .380-caliber semi-automatic pistol of Frederick H. Yeger — a former city police lieutenant who is coordinator of the county drug task force.

The gunshot was fired from Yeger's gun Thursday afternoon while he was eating lunch in the squad room of the center in the Medical Arts Building, 230 N. Fifth St., according to Lawrence Palmer, BCNIC executive director.

"I am waiting to hear if the state police will investigate," Yatron said. "We aren't sure if it was an accident."

Yeger will continue to work for the county, pending the results of the investigation, Yatron said.

Yatron said police would probably investigate at least two versions of the incident.

Yatron said one version, provided by Palmer, is the gun was mishandled while it was being

Jurors find Gabor guilty on 3 counts

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Actress Zsa Zsa Gabor was convicted Friday of slapping a motorcycle officer, driving without a valid driver's license, and having an open container of alcohol in her $215,000 Rolls-Royce convertible when she was stopped while driving in Beverly Hills on June 14.

The fiery former Miss Hungary, whose outspoken comments outside of court led to a $500 fine for contempt of court, was found not guilty of disobeying Officer Paul Kramer when she drove away from him after a traffic stop.

Jurors deliberated more than 10 hours over three days in reaching their verdicts after a 15-day trial.

I'd have been surprised if I wasn't found guilty," Gabor told reporters on the courthouse steps.

Two plead guilty in tax-cheating case

By Don Spatz
Eagle Times

Two officers of Reading Industrial Scrap Co., 430 Walnut St., pleaded guilty Friday in U.S. District Court here to cheating the Internal Revenue Service out of more than $1.2 million in personal and corporate income taxes from 1983 to 1986.

Larry L. Goldberg, 48, of the 1200 block of Monroe Avenue, Wyomissing, RINCO president, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the government and to ing false tax returns.

Robert H. Naspinsky, 43, of the 100 block of Halsey Avenue, Midvale Manor, vice president and general manager, pleaded guilty to conspiracy and to aiding and abetting.

The guilty pleas immediately followed the arraignment of the pair in federal court in The Madison. Fourth and Washington streets. The pleas came after an agreement was reached between the pair and the U.S. attorney's office.

Judge Daniel H. Huyett Jr. scheduled sentencing for Dec. 5. Each faces a maximum prison term of eight years, and a total of $500,000 in fines.

According to Assistant U.S. Attorney Odell Guyton Goldberg during the period from 1983 to 1986, demanded that at least five companies buying RISCO scrap metal make checks out to him personally, rather than to the company.

either cashed by Naspinsky, or deposited in Goldberg's personal bank accounts, Guyton said.

Either way, the checks were not reported as income either in the company records or tax returns, or in Goldberg's or Naspinsky's tax returns, Guyton said.

Nevertheless, he said, the pair paid cash in buying furniture, electronic equipment, home improvements, vehicles, jewelry, and other luxuries for $60,000.
